On January 8th, thousands of fans flooded the Ladd-Peebles Stadium, filling it with scarlet and black. Fans raveled nearly five hundred miles to Mobile, Alabama to witness Arkansas State take on Northern Illinois Jniversity. Due to the mass amount of cheering, it was obvious that the Red Wolves had an immense amount f support. A parade was held the night before the game to help get the players pumped up for the next day's ame. The team was riding high on a nine game winning streak and played their hearts out. Coach David Gunn id an outstanding job serving as ASU's interim head coach for the game. The ASU defense posted a season-igh 11 tackles for loss. They also posted one interception giving them 19 for the season, and tying them for the orth most in Sun-Belt history. ASU finished with over 300 yards of total offense for the twelfth time that eason. The Red Wolves finished the season with a record of 10-3. The ten victories tied for the forth most in chool history. They were also named the Sun Belt Conference Champions.

Honoring His Legacy
Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

His legacy is celebrated once a year, and his life changing message will be remembered by many. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. had a dream. His dream became a reality.

Multicultural Center, Niya Blair, Brittany Jackson, and Justin Dupree made the week long events of celebrating MLK possible.

Starting off the festivities on a Monday was the community parade. A one-man play was performed on Tuesday, and the play had a 19th century spin-off, which included many inspirational people such as Malcom X and Thurgood Marshall.

A candle light vigil was held that following Wednesday at Heritage Plaza Lawn and an estimated eighty people attended to honor Dr. King.

The last event held was a performing arts show. The show displayed a variety of talents for people to watch and enjoy. Participants recited poems, danced, and sang. About one hundred fifty people attended to see these great talents.

Jackson, Director of SAB Multicultural Events, wanted to "spice up" MLK and include more student involvement and performances.

It was Niya Blair's, Assistant Dean/Director of the Multicultural Center, first year organizing the events. She said, "the events were all well attended, but I wish there was more diversity in the crowd."

The four months spent planning the MLK events ended with a successful week honoring the great Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blair also said, "The MLK celebration is a great way for the campus to come together in his spirit and remember his legacy."

Miss ASU beauties of stAte

Miss Arkansas State University is an annual pageant sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha for female Arkansas State University students. Miss ASU serves as a preliminary for the Miss Arkansas pageant and raises money each year for local scholarships and charity. Participants are nominated and sponsored by various organizations on campus and around the Jonesboro area. Contestants competed in a variety of categories throughout the night, including swimsuit, talent, and evening gown. Contestants were also interviewed prior to the pageant with questions involving their philanthropic platform and current events.

Miss ASU 2012 was Chelsea Treadway from Batesville, AR. Treadway said that upon entering Miss ASU she never thought winning was even an option. She went on to say that winning the title will always be one of her most precious memories. Other awards (shown on opposite page) were Mollie Parker, first runner up; Maegan Inzer, second alternate; Sarah Hamilton third alternate; and Ashley Williams fourth alternate. Mollie Parker said her favorite moment of the night was, "The first time that I walked on stage. It was an amazing feeling seeing all of my Chi Omega sisters holding signs and cheering." Natalie Marcus highly recommends getting involved on campus and says Miss ASU is a great way to start! Other awards received include Maegan Inzer, Interview Award; Sara Hamilton, Talent Award; Scarlette Drake, Miss Congeniality; and Carla Kemp, People's Choice.

Spring Events

SGA & SAB leadership

Student Government Association (SGA) and Student Activities Board (SAB) both played crucial roles that were led by great student leaders.

In 2012, SGA served as the voice for all students to get their opinions and thoughts heard. The president, Hunter Petrus said, "I truly enjoy being the SGA president because I get to see the enthusiasm and passion for ASU amongst all of the student body."

During the spring, SGA hosted events such as the Coaches Panel, where students could freely ask major questions to head coaches Malzahn, Brady, Boyer and Dr. Dean Lee. SGA handed out free visors to those that attended.

SAB provided entertaining and educational activities for all of the students and faculty to enjoy. In 2012, they hosted several events such as: Beach Bash, Spring Fest, Mardi Gras, Cultural Week, Fashion Show, Dance Night, MLK Celebration, and Pride Day.

All of the SAB events took a lot of planning and were planned at least three months in advance. Stevie Overby, Brittany Jackson, Shelby Brooks, and Colea Blann were some of the leaders that made it a great spring, full of fun activities.

SGA and SAB in 2012 were two very influential campus organizations that provided leadership and great opportunities for students.

The Registered Student Organizations of Arkansas State University participate in enjoyable, exciting, and emotional events each semester that bring the people in each group closer together. The spring of 2012 was no exception.

Chinese and Japanese cultures were showcased at their own separate events: the Chinese New Year and the Japanese Spring Festival. A Touch of Class dancers let loose at Dance Evolution. "What really bonded us was preparation for the show with all the rehearsals we had. The actual show itself was just the icing on the cake," Brittany Foster said. Various talent shows, including one sponsored by the Gay-Straight Alliance, allowed for students to demonstrate a part of their lives that may not often be seen. At other times, life brings out moments that require people to come together for the greater good; this was the case for the Black Student Association, who brought awareness to ASU about the passing of Trayvon Martin, a 17-year old student who lived in Florida.

Whether it was for an important cause or simply for fun, events like these always find a way to bring students together.

ROBERT WOODS DURING THE GSA DRAG SHOW

I recommend everyone go to any Drag Show the Gay-Straight Alliance puts on! My favorite part of the show was when Demonica was singing "Talk That Talk" by Rihanna and started to flip on stage.

Multicultural Center Events

cultural and leadership opportunities

"The Multicultural Center strives to sustain an inclusive campus environment that values and respects all members of the university community."

This is a statement that the center, located on the third floor of the Carl R. Reng Student Union, follows on a daily basis. Along with providing "educational, cultural, and social programs and initiatives that support student success for all students with specific concentration on minority and underrepresented student populations," the Multicultural Center promotes and runs various special events that support important causes and purposes.

Many students and staff participated in spring events held by the Multicultural Center. This includes Black History Month events; tribute to Black History with Judge Glenda Hatchett, Soul Food Dinner, art display and lecture, and Gospel Explosion. Other spring events include the Women's Leadership Conference, a Women's History Month lecture series, a minority recruitment event, and a multicultural graduation reception. The center also took a group of students to the Wiley College Ethical Student Leadership Conference.

These spring events were inspirational and helpful to many students at ASU. "The Women's Leadership Conference was one of the first conferences here where I felt like I was learning and growing as a person. [It] all came together rather nicely to help me personally feel motivated to do more with my life," Charmaine Foster said.

While the events may have lasted for a small amount of time, the impact they had on students and people in the community will last a lifetime.

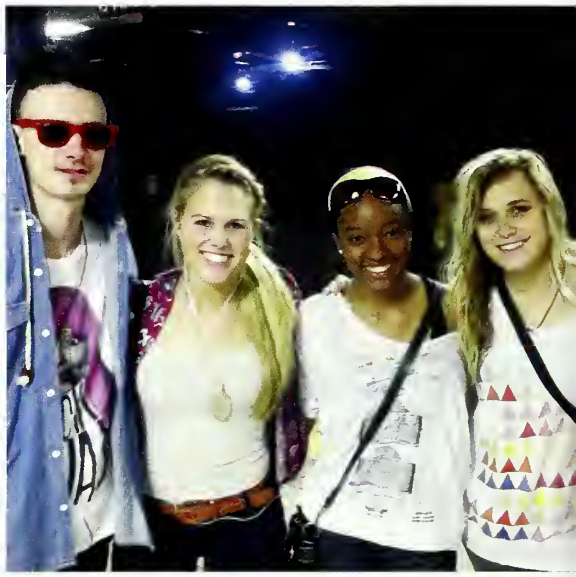
Spring Break adventures here and there



Spring Break always brings a much needed break and fun to the middle of a hectic semester. Spring Break 2012 was a week away from school where students traveled, relaxed, spent time with friends and family, and much more.

Arkansas State had students traveling from California to New York and across the globe. Junior Tanner Oxner went to Chicago for the week. He says his favorite part about the trip was, "getting to know the rest of the team that went, doing the service projects, and visiting the different attractions. Not to mention almost getting lost in Downtown Chicago and getting my first taste of deep dish pizza!"

Whether ASU Spring Breakers stayed in Jonesboro or traveled long distances, everyone enjoyed the break. Senior Cody Mothershed said he mostly worked during Spring Break but was definitely happy for no classes that week. He adds, "My daughter was born March 16th so for her first week I got to be with her and help out, instead of being in class all day. It was perfect timing."

Six students received Distinguished Student Awards. Of those six, one student stood out based on her character, determination, involvement and academic achievement, and was selected as the R. E. Lee Wilson Award recipient. Candi Biggers said, "I was very stressed throughout several times of my undergraduate career, but all the stress and hardwork put into the last four years was recognized with this extraordinary honor." NPHC WEEKS with one week, so much can happen

National Pan-Hellenic Council organizations each hosted a week to recognize the qualities of their fraternity or sorority. Some groups aimed to schedule their week around Founders Day to include a special Founders Day activity.

The week served as a time for the members to form strong relationships with potential new members and the community.

The week often included many volunteer events to support philanthropies as well as a showcase of new members. The fraternities and sororities also had the chance to have an end-of-the-week party to bring their chapter closer together.

"Individually we stand strong, but together we can make a difference," Omega Psi Phi member Darius Davis said. "Also,Greek unity within the NPHC is key to a successful Greek life."

NPHC also participated in competitions such as Best Stepper and stroll offs, which the groups went all or nothing to support their sorority or fraternity.

students celebrate greek life

From kickball games to obstacle courses, costume shows to talent competitions, greeks gathered for fun during Greek Week. The ultimate prize: greek unity.

"By having Greek Week, our goal was to increase greek unity, market to make greek life more visible, come together for the common good, and include a service component," Greek Life Assistant Dean, Alexis Hurdle said. "We wanted to get back to the greek values and emphasize brotherhood and sisterhood and bring the concept of unity and bonding within a chapter through the games."

Interfraternity Council (IFC), National Pan-Hellenic Council (NHPC), and National Panhellenic Council (NPC) organized various head-to-head challenges. This provided numerous opportunities for donations to benefit St. Jude's Children's Hospital. One of these events, sponsored by the executive board, was Up Til Dawn, which raised $30,981.08 for the year.

"We originally set our goal to be $25,000. As the year progressed we thought maybe $30,000 at the most but was still unsure," Hurdle said. "Our outcome was just amazing."

The Red Wolves baseball team had an exciting 2012 season. They finished the season second in the Sun Belt Conference with an overall record of 33-22.

After holding a 2-1 lead in seven innings at the championship game of the 2012 Sun Belt Conference Baseball Tournament, ASU fell to ULM, who rallied with three runs in the eighth and went on to defeat the Red Wolves 4-2.

Several ASU players were drafted to play professionally, including Michael Falkner (Seattle Mariners, 12th round), who hit .291 on the season, and became the ASU single-season stolen base leader during the 2012 campaign, finishing the year with 41 stolen bases on 42 attempts.

Brandon Farley (San Francisco Giants, 33rd round) made 29 relief appearances during the season and was instrumental in the Sun Belt Tournament.

Jacob Lee (Cleveland Indians, 9th round) was the 293rd pick in the MLB draft and became the highest drafted player in ASU history.

Following a winning season the year before, the ASU men's basketball team had high expectations. They finished the 2011-2012 season with a record of 17-19, nine of those losses being within 10 points, and two decided in overtime.

During regular season play, both Malcoln Kirkland and Trey Finn were named as Sun Belt Player of the Week on separate occasions. Marcus Hooten was named Mid-Major National Player of the Week after scoring the game-winning 3-point shot against North Texas during regular season play.

After knocking off No. 8 seeded FAU and No. 1 seeded Middle Tennessee in the Sun Belt Conference Tournament in March, Arkansas State, seeded at No. 9, fell 76-64 to No. 5 North Texas, ending their season with a 7-9 record for conference play.

After ending regular season play with a conference record of 6-10 and an overall record of 12-17, the Lady Red Wolves entered the Sun Belt Conference Tournament to face the women of South Alabama in the first round. The ladies suffered a loss to the Jaguars, but vowed to come back stronger.

The Lady Red Wolves did not have an easy season, but there were many high points amongst the losses. During the season, Coach Brian Boyer became the first basketball coach in ASU history to reach 200 victories, and graduating senior NeNe Hurst-McLennan became the first player in ASU history to record more than 1,000 points, 500 rebounds, 250 assists, 200 steals, 100 three-pointers, and 50 blocks in her career.

"This was a big accomplishment for me, because with so many setbacks and injuries I didn't think it was possible," Hurst-McLennan said.

The Red Wolves Bowling team made their fifth consecutive appearance at the national tournament in 2012. They finished the regular season with an 80-23 record; the second most wins in school history. They were ranked first for the NCAA tournament, but was eliminated after three matches of bracket play.

Rachael Gittings was named to the NTCA All-American first team and also earned a spot on the Junior USA Bowling team.

Amanda LaBossier was named to three different all-tournament teams during the season, including the Kat Klash, Mid-Winter Classic, and the Prairie View A&M Invitational. She was also a second-team NTCA All-America selection.

Among her other accomplishments, Sarah Lokker was named to the National Ten Pin Coaches Association as Rookie of the Year for the 2011-2012 season and was named to the NTCA All-American Third Team.

The men's golf team had several successes in regular season play before wrapping up the spring season at the Sun Belt Conference Tournament, finishing 11th and taking the team academic award.

One defining moment was when senior Sawyer Radler won the Red Wolf Intercollegiate Crown on April 3. "Sawyer was just kind of feeling it out there, and I'm extremely proud of him," said ASU head coach Steve Johnson.

The women's team finished seventh in the Sun Belt Conference Tournament for the 2012 spring season.

Jennifer Welch led the Lady Red Wolves, ending the tournament tied for 10th. Welch earned All-Sun Belt Conference honors for her performance.

During the 2012 fall season, the ladies had three top-two finishes, led by freshman Abi Laker. Laker finished in the top five in three different tournaments, winning her first NCAA tournament at KU.

Sharika Nelvis, left, accumulated four gold medals at the meet, as well as the Sun Belt Conference's Top Female Performer of the Meet title. She later went on to the NCAA Division I National Championship and earned a rank of 14th in the 100 meter dash and 16th in the 100 meter hurdles.

"I was able to qualify in two events. I was honored and excited to have that opportunity. I was also nervous going against a lot of the top runners there. I was satisfied with the results in the 100 meter dash, but disappointed with the hurdle race. I think I did great, but I still have a lot to work on to be greater this year," Nelvis said.

JESSICA GONER

In the past year, Arkansas State University has elcomed the ASU Softball Club with open arms. Juring a game, Jessica Waggoner (Fort Smith, Ark.) an be found out in center field, giving it her all. Vaggoner is a senior psychology major with a minor n health promotions. Softball is something that is xtremely important to Waggoner, and it is clear that ne is passionate about the sport. She says she enjoys oftball because, "It's a getaway and it's something that kes away everything else. I love all of the girls on my eam, and they are just like my sisters. It has always een that way for any team that I have played on. You ist grow close; you get really close to your teammates. 's a getaway from reality, and it's a way to kind of just t loose."

Waggoner's life has always revolved around softball. started playing softball when I was three years old. 's really been a lifetime affair. Actually, I never even layed t-ball. My dad played slow pitch in those ntense slow pitch leagues when I was young. He oached me as I grew up and told me I was never oing to play t-ball. So I was actually three years old, laying slow pitch on an eight and under team. That as my first year. My dad was a little bit intense!" Vaggoner also stated that it was her dad who got her nto the game.

Although she has a handful of great memories from ne sport, there is one that sticks out in her mind. "It as during my senior year. I actually lived in Tulsa all f my life. I'm from Fort Smith, AR so it was two ours away. My dad, he never really got to watch me. e got to watch me play some but it wasn't a whole t. Whenever I moved back home with him my senior ear, I actually hit a homerun my first game. It was a ome game and I was just so excited. That was robably one of my proudest moments." She went on say, "My favorite game was probably a game that I ayed in Houston, Texas. I hit two out that game, and got defensive MVP that game also." Waggoner is not l about the praise of her accomplishments; "I'll admit ough, I've also had my bad games. That's for sure."

Waggoner's accolades are phenomenal. She made ll-Conference both her junior and senior years of gh school. She also had the honor of being featured All High School Sports, the magazine.

When asked what her favorite part about the sport , she joking laughed and replied, "Winning! Whose vorite part isn't winning? Winning and the strength f my relationships with my teammates are my favorite arts." Her favorite softball player is United States lympic gold medalist, Jennie Finch. "I'm like every rl. I like Jennie Finch. Every softball girl is going to y Jennie Finch," Waggoner stated. "She just has a eat attitude. If you read any of her quotes or anything that she says, she is very family oriented and very religious, I guess you would say. She is just very inspirational. I love her beliefs and how she looks at things."

Waggoner managed to hear about the ASU Softball Club via social media. "It was through Facebook. That's how everyone hears about everything." The team generally practices for two hours a day, three days a week, with an additional day added if needed. Their routines are pretty vigorous. "Depending on the day and what coach is running it, we will usually do a little bit of a warm up." She elaborated, "We will throw. We have a drill where we will all get at shortstop and first base and we will field balls, throw to first, and switch lines. We will do a few more little throwing drills around the bases and then we will all split up and go to our positions. In the infield, we will all do infield work." Being so dedicated to practicing does have its disadvantages. "We are practicing at 5:30 in the morning right now, so we will usually practice inside because its not even daylight yet. If we are lucky enough to get outside, which we haven't been, we will do more drills in our positions. When we are out there we will do a little bit of infield and outfield, and we will also do relays. We will usually do a few hitting drills too."

Waggoner expressed one main attribute for girls who are interested in becoming a member of the team; "We want girls who have heart. As long as you get out there and are dedicated you can pretty much look around and learn more about playing. It takes heart and dedication, especially since we are not getting money to play. You really have to go in with a good attitude."

Without hesitation, Waggoner spouted off the best advice that she has ever been given. "My favorite quote, which was our team quote whenever I lived in Tulsa was 'Its not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog.' That can relate to anything in life. I'm kind of a little person, and I have always been one of the smallest on the team so I think that can really apply to me." If she were to give advice to anyone who wanted to play softball, she would tell them to persevere. "Never ever give up. Softball, like baseball, is a game of failure. It can be frustrating but just never give up and never quit trying."

As far as her life after Arkansas State, Waggoner is not quite sure about what she wants to do. "I'm really not sure yet, not at all," she said. "I'm a personal trainer. Right now I have a personal trainer certification so it would be nice to possibly do something more with that because my minor is health promotions. Maybe I could get into a larger gym or something like that." One thing that is for sure is if she gives half as much effort to her career as she does to softball, then she will be successful in whatever she does.

Global Student Leaders around the world

Global Student Leaders of 2012, Colea Blann, Veronica Heatherly, Allen Horton, Hunter Petrus, Annie Robinson, Courtney Bolin, Natalie Wilbanks, and Alicia Rose had a once in a life time trip to Ecuador. While there, they did both fun-filled and educational activities. The leaders got to experience what it was like to live in a third world country for ten days.

To be a Global Student Leader there are a few requirements. Students had to have a minimum of a 2.85 grade point average and must have completed at least twenty-four hours of credit. Once the eight students were selected from a detailed application, they had to go through an interview process before finally being selected.

Once they arrived in Ecuador their days were filled with activities. First, they visited a local University to experience the educational differences between Ecuador and America. Next, they literally stood in the middle of the world at the equator and balanced eggs on tooth picks. Then, they ziplined and toured the Valley of the Waterfalls, as well as visited Ancient Inca Historical Sites and Ruins.

While in Ecuador the group had to make some hard adjustments. One of those adjustments was after using the bathroom, they couldn't flush their toilet paper, and finding things to eat was at times difficult.

Advisor for the Global Student Leaders, Natalie Eskew, said, "The leaders were a great bunch of students with positive attitudes. They weren't afraid to try new things." Many of the group members described the trip as a "once in a lifetime opportunity."

I thought the trip was amazing. It was truly a once in a lifetime experience. We all learned so much about their culture and way of life.
ALLEN HORTON

My favorite thing about being a Global Student Leader was experiencing the culture of Ecuador. It was great to see how other cultures lived, behaved, and functioned. We got to see where they lived, what they ate, and what they did. Over all, it was one of the most valuable experiences of my life!
HUNTER PETRUS

I loved going to the monkey farm where we had the opportunity to be very close to different types of monkeys, in a somewhat natural habitat. During my trip to Ecuador, I learned to be thankful for what we have here in America, since Ecuador is a third world country.

Summer Life

Summer is a time of long days, freedom, warm sunshine, and vacation. This summer ASU students went as far as Ecuador and Mexico during the break. Students took full advantage of the three-month summer break to travel, save up money at a job, intern, or rest a little.

One group of students bicycled from Tuscaloosa to Orange Beach doing mission work along the way, while others enjoyed trips to Maryland, New York, California, and Nevada. Some students couldn't get away from learning and went to study abroad or on a long-term field trip or took on summer internships to get ahead in their classes. Senior, Kali James said she had a great time relaxing at the beach over the summer, and she was lucky to get to work from her computer and stay in Florida.

Summer months are always fun for ASU students, full of memories to share with classmates when the fall semester begins again. It's no wonder they are among the favorite months with all the memories made to last.

Orientation Leaders

welcoming the new Red Wolves

After an intense semester of training and learning about Arkansas State University, thirteen Orientation Leaders embarked on a summer that they w never forget. Along with the help of their advisor, Natalie Eskew, the studen helped incoming freshmen become accustomed to college life. Each orientat day included two separate sessions. During each of these, it was the Orientat Leaders jobs to welcome students and their parents, check students in, help schedules completed, provide tours, and perform a skit. The skit was about t ASU freshmen who competed in different game shows to complete their day orientation. Jacob Yates was the star of the show as Jeff "Howlworthy" and n one could forget Dakota Weatherly's line, "I'm Dakota and howl yes!"

Not only did the students help with New Student Orientation, but they completely facilitated the Camp ASTATE sessions. These two-day, one night sessions were extremely different from what the students had experienced du their Orientation sessions. They got the chance to participate in ice breakers games that allowed them to get to know one another, as well as diversity activities that challenged the students' beliefs about pressing-issues. The stud had the opportunity to get to know the Orientation Leaders a little better as This gave them the chance to ask any questions that they may have had abo Arkansas State and college life. After all of the Orientations and Camp AST events came to an end, the Orientation Leaders celebrated their experience v one final dinner and an awards ceremony. It was truly an experience that th leaders would never forget.

While most incoming freshmen spend their summer wondering what college will be like and if they will quickly make new friends, one hundred students jumped at the opportunity to get ahead of the curb and experience a bit of college during their break. Over the summer, the Orientation Leaders facilitated two Camp ASTATE sessions; one in June, the other in August. CAMP ASTATE is a 2-day, 1-night program designed to provide students with the information to help aid in the student's transition process to Arkansas State University.

As the freshmen arrived, they were immediately thrown into activities that aim to help them to get to know one another better, as well as learn more information about Arkansas State. The students started off the first day with activities such as Adjective Name Game, Color Strips, Walking Billboard, The Sheet Game, and Drawbridge. All of these games were designed to help the students become familiar with one another so they could set aside all of their nervousness and just have fun. Over the next twenty-four hours the students participated in activities that challenged their teamwork capabilities, their logic skills, their thought processes, and their ability to let loose and have fun, all while making memories that they will never forget.

When the time came for the campers to leave, numbers were exchanged, new friendships were made, and the students left even more eager to begin their ASU experiences. Camp ASTATE created a new pack of leaders that were more than ready to start their legacy at Arkansas State.

While most students lay out in the sun all summer, others are still learning and working hard in the classroom. At Arkansas State, students have the opportunity to take classes during the summer. Summer semester is not as long as Fall or Spring, so students can get lengthy classes done in about a month. Sophomore Mandi Kay Bryant said, "I took Principles of Personal Health to get some extra hours since it doesn't take as long. It's a two-fer!" Matt Smith took summer classes to free up his schedule during the rest of the year, "Taking it in the summer gave me greater flexibility for scheduling my final semester with more relaxed hours. I can use that extra free time to work during the day next semester and make more money which is always amazing." Students take summer classes for many reasons. Senior Josep Rhodes took classes so that he could go ahead and graduate by next May, while Grace Betz, to an International Studies class overseas for the exciting adventure along with her fellow Red W classmates. The Summer terms really do benefi students in many ways whether it is an adventu or extra hours.

STATE UNIVERSITY

Student, mother, friend, volunteer and leader are all words that can be used to describe senior Annie Robinson. Annie is a social work major looking to minor in interdisciplinary family studies from Wynne, Arkansas. Due to her grades and involvement in high school, Annie was immediately drawn to Arkansas State University. "I was in the top 5% of my class my junior and senior year of high school", Robinson said. "With my exceptional grades, I was invited to Discovery Diversity hosted by ASU my junior and senior years. Attending both of these helped me fall in love with all the great things ASU has to offer. Also, being offered the Thomas Minority Scholarship helped make my decision to attend ASU."

When it comes to being involved on campus, Annie's commitments are never ending. "I am Golden Key International Honor Society President. This is the top 15% of each class in academics. I'm the Vice President of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Inc., Volunteer ASU Issues and Awareness Co-Chair, and Student Conduct Board Secretary. I am also a member of the Student Union Advisory Board, the Social Work Organization, and the National Association of Black Social Workers." Annie is extremely passionate about the organizations that she is involved in and gives each of them her all. She has acted as the Secretary and Scholarship Chairman, Vice President and Fundraiser Chairman, and Step Master in her sorority. Annie says, "My favorite activity to participate in is my sorority, Zeta Phi Beta. I love the ladies that I call my "Sorors." I feel like this is my family in Jonesboro. These ladies are always here for me no matter what. I have been with these ladies since the fall of my sophomore year. We have had our good and bad times just like any other family, but at the end of the day they are still my Zeta family. If it wasn't for some of these ladies, especially my Soror Aisha Stafford; I don't think I would be the business lady I am today. Zeta has also given me a more caring fulfilling heart to always do for others before myself."

During the summer, Annie had the privilege of traveling to Ecuador with Global Student Leaders. The GSL program rewards the most outstanding student leaders at ASTATE with a once in a lifetime opportunity. This program advances the proposition in the ASTATE mission statement that we prepare students in challenging and diverse ways to become more productive global citizens. "My most rewarding experience at ASU was being selected a Global Student Leader," Annie stated. "It was an honor to have top administrators to think highly of me. Having the chance to travel to the country of Ecuador was a once in a life time opportunity for myself. It was an experience I will treasure for the rest of my life. I also met some of the other top leaders on campus, which I now have a bond with."

"Being a Global Student Leader was an amazing feeling and opportunity for me. I never thought I would be considered for such a high honor on campus. Traveling to Ecuador taught me how privileged I am to live in America. It really opened my heart for the poverty that occurs in the country of Ecuador. However, I did have lots of exciting moments with the other travelers. There were three different parts of Ecuador the group visited on the trip, which was Quito, Banos, and Cuenca. My favorite town was Quito. I really enjoyed the nice hotel, the spa that was only twenty dollars, and being able to stand on the center of the equator. Ecuador is the center of the earth and they had a museum that had lots of amazing things to see."

Along with being a student and an active leader, Annie is first and foremost a mother to her daughter, Kaleigh. Since Annie is so busy at school, it is a wonder how she manages to balance all of her time between school and motherhood. Annie says that she easily manages to keep her priorities straight. "I put all my events and meetings in my phone to keep up with the organizations I'm involved with. I also make sure I have time for the activity before I fully commit to it. All the organizations I'm involved in have been accepting of me bringing my daughter to some activities. My boyfriend Adrian has been very helpful with assisting with my daughter when I have events my daughter couldn't attend. Motherhood is a challenging job, but I love it. I feel like having a child really keeps my time management skills on task. I use every single minute of my day wisely. When I'm at work, I'm always in my books if I have completed my task. I always put my daughter before any of the organizations I'm involved in. My daughter loves being around all of the great people that are involved in some of the same organizations as me. I truly feel that me being a parent has helped me develop into a more poised individual."

Annie also says that although her life might be difficult, she does not struggle. "I don't struggle with any of these things," she stated. My academics are always great. I have made the Chancellor's list, Dean's list, Strong Turner 3.0 Club, and I am a member of Golden Key. I love being involved in extracurricular activities which keeps me going. Being a parent is very hard, but I have learned to cope with the few challenges I have faced in my life. I feel all these things are strengths rather than struggles. It sets me aside from the person next to me. Not very many students can say their academics are high, they are a leader on campus, and they have a young child."

After graduation, Annie plans to work with Child Protective Services in a poverty stricken area. She elaborated, "Being a parent has opened my heart for children more. My daughter has a wonderful life, and I want other children to have the same opportunities as well." When giving advice to other students on how to get involved she stated, "I would tell any student, don't be afraid to get involved on campus. No matter if you are a first generation college student, low income student, or non-traditional student there is always a place on campus for you. My boyfriend always told me, "If you want to do something, go for it. Don't let having a child hinder you from trying. You have as much as a chance succeeding as the next person trying."

On August 18th, hundreds of Arkansas State students, staff, and faculty woke up bright and early to hel all of the incoming freshmen move onto campus and jump start their college careers. Many of ASU's Registered Student Organizations assisted with the moving. Student Government Association, Student Activities Board, Volunteer ASU, and all of the Greek organizations represented the Leadership Center by lending a helping hand. Journey Campus brought over one hundred volunteers to assist with the move in.

Freshman Jacquelyn Alexander said, "They had everything upstairs in ten minutes and I was on the seventh floor. They all ran up the stairs pretty fast. There were also so many cars there that we had to park on the other side of University Hall and I lived in Kays Hall. They loaded all of my things up on a trailer and drove us over there. It was an adrenaline rushing experience."

The weather had been extremely hot that week, but the temperature miraculously dropped for the day. Various organizations provided free food and drinks while others handed out flyers to promote different activities around campus. With all of the volunteers, beautiful weather, great attitudes, and Red Wolves pride, Operation Move In went wonderfully and was one of the best move in days that Arkansas State University has ever seen.

The first few weeks of college can either make or break the rest of a student's career. To make the first few eks at Arkansas State the best that they can be, Student Government Association, Student Activities Board, d the rest of the Leadership Center worked together to create a great atmosphere. The first week kicked off Saturday with Operation Move In. After the students settled in, classes began on Monday along with a de variety of events filling the rest of the week. That afternoon, a DJ provided beats to hype up the energy r games on the lawn. This included a few different carnival rides for the students to enjoy. Daniel Martin ovided the entertainment for Tuesday afternoon. Martin is a comedian/magician who made it a priority to teract with the students. That night, a laser tag obstacle course was set up for students to partake in.

Wednesday was "Meet the Greeks," which gave the Greek organizations a chance to showcase themselves to udents who were interested in recruitment. This also gave NPHC organizations the opportunity to step. opical Sno and Tropical Smoothie provided free beverages while a DJ provided the music. The following ednesday was the Community Fair, which hosted nearly one hundred fifty different local businesses and mpus organizations. Thousands of students roamed through the different booths and acquired tons of free ms. Junior Kari Henderson said, "I used the Community Fair to my advantage to visit the Greek ganization booths to get help identifying people for the yearbook." From prize drawings to free shirts, and om food to games, the Community Fair was a major success that helped to prove that ASU provides udents with many fun opportunities.

Red Wolf fans packed the stands of Liberty Bank Stadium for Order of the Pack. Order of the Pack is Arkansas State University's annual pep rally that kicks off the school year, highlighting different aspects of AS The A-Team, cheerleaders, and band helped pump up an already rowdy crowd with school chants, cheers, and the fight song.

Thousands of students and Red Wolf fans showed up to the event ready to cheer and show off their spirit. The student body was welcomed by SGA President, Hunter Petrus, given campus history and new news, introduced to athletic teams, and taught new cheers and traditions. Students showed tons of excitement towar the new school year and season-opener home football game the following Saturday against the University of Memphis. The cheers roared in when a new student section was announced for the football games.

This was the 16th year for the pep rally and was sponsored by the Student Activities Board. Order of the Pack helped to get all of the students, staff, faculty, and community pumped up about the upcoming sports seasons and ready to kick off another great year at ASU! Along with getting the opportunity to become more acquainted with the athletics department, attendants received a commemorative Red Wolves cinch backpack.

The 2012 Homecoming theme was announced at Order of the Pack as "Let the good times Howl," and let them it did. Scarlet and black decorations filled campus to prepare for the big game on Saturday. Homecoming events officially kicked off on Tuesday with the Mardi Gras Costume Contest and the 2012 Homecoming Court announced. Other events of the week included the "Bourbon Street Steppin' Step Show," voting for Homecoming King and Queen, a carnival, a comedy show, a DJ, the display decorating contest, the Mardi Gras mask-making contest, Yell Like Hell Spirit Competition, and a free concert by The Ohio Players.

An immense amount of school spirit was shown throughout the week and fun was had by all. When asked about stepping, Delta Zeta Erin Curtis said, "I've always been a performer, so when I'm out there giving it my all I just try to remember all the moves and just have fun with it." Paige Walker said she really enjoyed the step show. She went on to say she was most impressed with Chi Omega's routine. "They did a really awesome job dancing," she commented, "they were all on beat perfectly. You could tell they really practiced hard." Colea Blann, Student Activities Board president, added, "My favorite part of Homecoming Week was the step show and finding out that I was selected to be on court. Homecoming Court for 2012 was announced on Tuesday during lunch. Homecoming Court is decided by combining interviews and student votes. Each year five male and five female candidates are chosen to represent Arka State on Homecoming Court.

Homecoming Court was presented to attendants of the Homecoming G Saturday followed by the 2012 King and Queen announcement. This year Becca Hutchinson was crowned Queen and Jacob Yates was crowned King. Everyone on court enjoyed the experience of campaigning, the opportunity represent an ASU Registered Student Organization, and the honor being or Homecoming Court brings. Senior Paige Turpin said, "Being on Homecom Court was such an amazing experience! I would have never dreamed of bein part of a university's homecoming court! It was more than I hoped for!" Natalie Wilbanks added, "It was a lot of fun; Arkansas State is my passion a I love my Red Wolves!" Senior Sean Calaway was sponsored by the Honors College, but also represented Pi Kappa Alpha. He commented that, "It was a awesome experience with such a wonderful group of individuals. I felt especially blessed to share that experience with my big bro, Austin Copenha as well as two of my best friends Paige and Natalie." Homecoming Game

a howl of a good time

Homecoming activities go on for a full week and lead up to the most anticipated event, the Homecoming game. The Red Wolves got off to a rocky start but secured the victory over the South Alabama Jaguars 36-29. ASU capitalized on the Jaguars thirteen penalties which gave the Red Wolves eighty-one extra yards. Ryan Aplin moved into second place among the Sun Belt Conference all-time passing leaders with a total of two hundred and three passing yards and seventeen completions against South Alabama. Senior linebacker Nathan Herrold received a career-high seventeen tackles, the most by an ASU player since 2005, and J.D. McKissic led the receivers with seven catches for forty-one yards with David Oku rushing for eighty-four yards on twenty-two attempts.

Liberty Bank Stadium was filled with excited students, alumni, and other decimated ASU fans. Freshman Blayne Schrepfer said, "The best part of the game was recovering the on-side kick to clinch the win." Travis Sharp adds, "I actually got to sit in the stands instead of taking pictures, it was a nice change. Being in the middle of the student section cheering on the Red Wolves is always a blast."

SGA Staff

the voice for all students

Student Government Association (SGA) is the voice for all students. They work closely with faculty and administrators, voicing opinions and suggestions of students. SGA stresses the importance that all students have the right to influence the way the campus runs.

SGA's 2012 staff consisted of senators who were representatives of each college and grade classification, and six head staff members who finalized all of the decisions. SGA met at regular meetings where they discussed the topics and concerns that students had. They hoped to provide educational, social, and political programming for ASU students.

Non-Trad Students
continuing with education

A non-traditional student is someone who is twenty-five years or older, did not enter college directly after high school, married or single with children, commute thirty miles from the university, working professionals or veterans.

In 2012, Non-Traditional Student Services planned several events for the students to engage in. Grab and Go Mondays provided coffee and pastries for the students on their way to class. In addition, Non-Traditional Student Week during November held many events and workshops celebrating non-traditional student success.

Non-traditional students are offered a variety of scholarships and financial aid. The Village apartments are designed especially to meet the needs of families, single, non-traditional undergraduates, married and graduate students. The non-traditional student lounge provided a quiet place for non-traditional students to study or kill some time between classes.

In additon to the lounge and events offered, there is also a student organization dedicated solely to non-trads. "As non-trads we tend to just focus on coming to class, doing our studies as quick as possible to head back home or work to take care of many of our other responsibilities, such as our children. We need to see ourselves as being a part of the ASU community and having school spirit. That is why, it is exciting for me to help start a student organization for nontraditional students that will better help students like me to connect more to ASU and get involved," said Angy" Abaunza, a Senior, Psychology Major and president of the Nontraditional Student Organization.

I enjoy being a non-traditional student but that doesn't mean I don't wish I could go back and just go when I was younger. I didn't start college until I was 30. The biggest chalienge I face as a non-trad student is not being able to be as active in the activities or clubs.

The WolfTracks Yearbook staff captured all of the traditions made at ASU in 2012. The staff consisted of eight editors that designed each page, wrote the stories, and wrote the captions. Additionally, there were six photographers to capture ASU events.

Pictures, copy, and quotes on every page allow students to remember the entertaining and educational events they had at ASU. The yearbook captures college life from everyday activities, sports, student organizations, and fun times that students will never forget. The WolfTracks Yearbook staff is dedicated to create a book that holds memories that will last a life time.

The Herald
forming ASU since 1921

2012, student editors of The Herald had the authority to make all content sions of the paper. Each issue consisted of news, life, opinion and sports ions that informed students about what was going on around campus. New es of The Herald were published on Mondays and Thursdays during the fall spring semesters and were available both on campus and online.

o keep the readers up to date, The Herald had online coverage with breaking s. Every story that The Herald published can also be found online. The ne edition of The Herald was founded in 1996.

he Herald staff consisted of nine production staff positions which included: or in chief, advertising manager, copy editor, news editor, life editor, nions editor, sports editor, online editor and photo editor. There were also lance staff positions such as: writer and reporter, senior staff writer, tographer or cartoonist.

ne 2012 Herald staff worked hard to be the first to report the stories going on ffecting ASU. Twice a week editors had production night with late hours in office to piece together a great paper. The Herald office is located in room of the Communications Building.

International Students bring the world to ASU

In 2012, many students from around the world came to Arkansas State University to seek an education in America. International students left behind their family and friends to experience the culture in a different country.

Many students in the international program come from China, Japan, South America, and many other countries. A total of sixty-eight different countries are represented at ASU. Many of the students come to America, a predominately English speaking country, knowing little or no English at all. The International Center for English (TICE) program is there to help these students develop the English language skills necessary for academic and social success.

ASU is a great place for international students to study for many reasons. Jonesboro is considered one of the safest cities in the US, and the cost of living is not high. In addition, it is the perfect size for students to be able to focus on their studies, but also have fun at the same time.

The mission statement for the international programs is, "As ambassadors for internationalization, the staff members in the Office of International Programs seek to provide international experiences for the ASUJ community through the presence of international students and faculty on the ASUJ campus and opportunities for all students and faculty to pursue their academic interests abroad."

ROTC - being all you can be

Arkansas State University is considered one of the top ten military-friendly schools in the nation. The ASU ROTC program provides a variety of opportunities for men and women to become leaders in the Army. The program has gone through many years and many changes to become what it is today.

The university's Army ROTC was established on January 20, 1936. At the time, it was required for all male students who went to ASU to take the first two years of ROTC classes. In 1952, ASU and twenty-nine other institutions across the nation validated the General Military Science curriculum; this allowed graduates of the ROTC program to serve in any branch of the Army. When the requirement for all men to take ROTC classes ended in 1971, women were finally allowed to enter the program.

Today, the ASU Red Wolf Battalion is stronger than ever before. ROTC Cadets train to become well-rounded individuals, excelling in leadership development, family commitments, community support and academics. Physical training takes place throughout the week, both on an individual basis and as a group. The group trains three days per week from 6:30 am to 7:30 am. Upperclassmen Cadets run the daily operations of the battalion and lead the underclassmen during training. In addition, Cadets participate in many extracurricular activities, including volunteer work and the Color Guard.

At the end of their journey in ROTC, they walk away not just with a college degree but with the experience needed to make a difference in the United States Army.

The Registered Student Organizations at ASU hold events each semester to bring students closer together. These organizations can be seen around campus regularly, but many may not know how they came to be.

To form an RSO, there are a few pieces necessary to complete the puzzle. First, a constitution with bylaws must be written up by a group of at least five or more members. After that, the group must find a faculty or staff member to sponsor and advise them. The group is classified as one of five areas of interest - religious, academic, sorority/fraternity, sports, and special interest.

The Rotary Club, for example, is a special interest club. Nick Ginardi said, "A typical meeting in the past has been every other Tuesday at Skinny J's. This year, it has been every week so that the students can get more involved with the organization and on campus. Also, it's a great tool to help us come together as one because it takes everyone. We have officer meetings to organize the next meeting as a whole. During these, we make executive decisions for dates and times for events. Planning events is always a group project because most projects requires help in many different ways. We have to get a group effort on putting together times and dates so that everyone can participate. After each meeting, our Vice President, Matt Curtis, sends out the minutes for each meeting."

Each organization is different in structure and in membership, but they all hold the common notion of serving a purpose.

Each year the Arkansas State University band, the Sound of the Natural State, provides nearly two hundred students with the opportunity to play music and do what they love.

Dr. Sarah Labovitz directed the band and prepared them to play musical sets that the fans would never forget. The musicians began practicing with their new director weeks before school even began. Outside under the sweltering heat, the band literally poured sweat and tears into their craft. In the end, the Sound of the Natural State were cranking out classic tunes such as Anyway You Want It, Final Countdown, Sweet Caroline, and Carry On Wayward Son. The band also added Vegas and Superhero-theme halftime shows to their repertoire.

Judging by the reactions of the crowd, the Sound of the Natural State never ceased to amaze fans and always put on a show to remember. Each game the band continued to perform classic sets that kept the crowd on their feet and screaming for more, making the Sound of the Natural State one of the University's greatest assets.

Being a part of the ASU Cheerleading Squad is a full year commitment representing the pride of the Red Wolves for basketball and football games, as well as many different events on and off campus. Made up of a coed and girls squad, the two work together to bring the spirit and tradition to every major sporting event for the Red Wolves Nation. "The role of the squads is to promote student participation in ASU athletic events. We would like to see more students involved in a spirited way at home football and basketball games and take pride in the Red Wolves," said Martha McFerron.

Though it may seem like all glitz and glam, the ASU cheerleaders are athletes just like any other sport with long hours of practice and workouts to manage technical feats and stunts. "Before the game, we always have the Red Wolf Walk through Tailgate City and then we stretch and warm up all of our skills that we will throw in the game, " said Amy Henson. "During the game we really focus on trying to keep the crowd involved and we try to fit in as many stunts as possible. After the game we always run out onto the field for one last fight song to wrap everything up."

Head Coach Gus Malzahn and the Red Wolves started off the 2012 football season on the road against one of the top teams in the nation, Oregon. The team's home opener against Memphis drew a crowd of 28,041, nearly filling newly-named Liberty Bank Stadium.

The Red Wolves suffered an early loss at home against Western Kentucky, but finished the rest of the season strong. Led by senior quarterback Ryan Aplin, the Red Wolves became bowl eligible after defeating North Texas on the road.

The team's win over ULM tied the Red Wolves for first place in the Sun Belt Conference. After his performance against ULM, Aplin earned the title of Sun Belt Offensive Player of the Week. During the game he accounted for three touchdowns and 378 of total offense.

ASU's last home game was against MTSU. The Red wolves won the game 45-0 and claimed the title of Sunbelt Conference Champions for the second year in a row.

It was no surprise that one of the most anticipated events of the year was football season. Students, faculty, taff, alumni, family, friends and fans packed the Liberty Bank Stadium to watch the Red Wolves take on their pponents. Along with the excitement of the games came the thrill of tailgating. While driving down Stadium oulevard, it is obvious when it is game day. Tailgate City and the Pines filled up early each morning with ardcore fans awaiting the days events. All of the Greek organizations, as well as many of the registered student rganizations tailgate in the pines, playing baggo and horseshoes, socializing and visiting with Governor Mike eebe who attended many of the games. Tailgate City was packed for each game as well. Food, fun and friends ould easily be found anywhere around the stadium.

Arkansas State students had no shortage of Red Wolves spirit. The designated students-only section was full uring each game. For the Code Red game against the University of Louisiana-Monroe, the stadium was a sea f red to be featured on ESPN. For the final home game of the season, which was also the game that determined he conference champions, the fans blacked out the entire stadium to show their support. For each game there as never a shortage of support, as well as excitement and fun. Along with all of the new chants and cheers, the adium heard howls like never before.

The Lady Red Wolves Soccer team rewrote the record book during the 2012 season by making it the most successful in ASU's history. The team finished with an overall 11-8-1 record and the most wins in school history.

Sophomore midfielder Christina Fink and senior defender Ashley McMurtry were named to the College Sports Madness All-Conference team at the end of regular season play. Fink scored a total of 29 goals for the regular season, the most ever during a single season by one player.

The team played Western Kentucky for its first game in the conference tournament, losing 1-0. The loss concluded the most successful season for the Lady Red Wolves soccer team.

"It's rather unfortunate that such a fun season came to a sudden end," ASU head coach Tafadzwa Ziyenge said.

GOLDEN ZHAO

Xinzhong Zhao, also known as Golden, is a senior dio and TV production major, with an emphasis on / production, from Urumqi, Xinjiang, China. ithin five minutes of meeting Golden it is obvious at he may possibly be one of the nicest people that a rson could ever meet. He is friendly and so positive out everything. He is also an extremely hard worker d gives his all at everything that he does. With a ile on his face and camera in hand, Golden can be otted all over campus taking beautiful photos. kansas State University is lucky to have such a ented student.

When considering where to attend college in the ited States, Golden said that ASU eventually won n over with its "friendly people, quality media ucation, and fair tuition fees." When asked what his orite thing about ASU is, he stated, "I like the ple here. They are really friendly to international dents. Moreover, I love the system here. ASU offers ood platform for media production students to do me really great production works, such as the ASU- station, KASU radio station, and The Herald wspaper. We have good equipment and skillful fessors. Last but not least, I love students here. I de many friends right here."

While studying radio production at ASU, his orite course has been Video Post Production with fessor Pillow. "The reason why I love it is that the s is not only teaching you the history of film and ting, but also lets students do some really good duction works," Zhao stated. "My final project was ree minute drama video. It also won the third place he regional NBS video competition." He added of professor, "Mr. Pillow is a very patient professor. is really helpful."

Golden is one of the most involved international dents on campus. He is the President of the dergraduate Research Organization as well as the e-President of the National Broadcasting Society. resume is chalked full of other activities such as J-TV staff, Chinese Student Organization member, photographer for both The Herald Newspaper and WolfTracks Yearbook.

Although Golden is an extremely successful student rkansas State, things have not always come easily him. "I have struggled with the food and uage," he stated. "It took me a long time to be used to living in Jonesboro. I need to do everything by myself here. I'm more independent than I was in China. I needed to pay different fees, find an apartment, buy a car, wash dishes, manage my finances, and cook by myself. I grew up during this time." When asked about making new friends here in Arkansas and remaining in contact with his friends from back home he said, "Yes, it was hard to meet my friends when I moved here. I go back to China once a year during the summer break. However, we always communicate with each other by the social networks, such as MSN, QQ, RENREN, Skype, and Facetime."

He seems to know exactly what he wants to do when he graduates college. "I will probably go to graduate school and continue studying film and TV production. I'm really interested in special effects designing and video editing. I want to be an editor or graphic designer when I finish my study plan." His dream job is to be a video editor or special effects designer for Warner Brothers. He has also seriously considered staying in the country after graduation. "I thought about staying in the US. I really like the media system here. Every place is fair to compete. Furthermore, there are more opportunities here. America has the most developed media system all over the world. I want to learn more and make a contribution for the area."

When asked what sets him apart from other students, Golden stated "First, I'm an international student, which brings a mixed education background. I'm more independent and have more self control. I'm always positive and enthusiastic. I like to experience different kinds of groups in my life. Last, but not the least, I love what I'm learning and what I'm planning to do in the future." Anyone who knows Golden knows this definitely applies to him and he is different from many students. If he were to give advice to other international students he would say, "Don't block yourself in your room or only hang out with your close friends. Communicate with your classmates, your professors, and even your neighbors. Participate in different events on campus and enjoy your American university life." For other students in his major he says, "Don't be satisfied with what books teach. Try to do as many real production works as possible. You should get in contact with the ASU-TV manager or staff to create or participate in some programs. Last but not the least, apply for different production competitions. In this way, you will know what you need to improve."

Holiday Events bringing cheer everywhere

Many Holiday celebrations took place on the campus of ASU this season. The very much anticipated Thanksgiving in the Caf kicked off the events. Faculty and staff at ASU volunteered their time to help serve the students at this dinner.

In addition, another annual event is the SAB sponsored Lighting of the Tree. This year the ASU Choir performed two songs and cookies and punch were served to the guests in attendance.

Chancellor and Dr. Dee Dee Hudson also opened up their home for several holiday parties. They hosted groups this season including: SGA, Strong Turner and Volunteer ASU; just to name a few. They also hosted an Open House on December 11th that all ASU employees were invited to attend. "Celebrating the Christmas holiday at the Chancellor's house is one of the many great experiences that I have been afforded through Volunteer ASU. Everything was amazing from the Hors d'Oeuvres to being surrounded by representatives of non profit organizations. From the moment I walked in the hospitality offered by Dr. Dee Dee was impeccable! It is an evening that I will always remember," said Makala Bell.

Religious Organizations

spiritual & personal growth

Through the religious organizations at ASU, students come together to achieve spiritual and personal growth. Each organization offers activities that do just that. This includes events like weekly lunch programs, scripture studies, mission trips and worship services both for freshmen only and for all college students.

Religious organizations have a special way of connecting with students and invoking something deep within them. Freshman Nicole Rigby said, "Ever since I started going to the Wesley I feel like I've found a home away from home. We are all very close there."

All the religious organizations allow for personal and spiritual growth in a variety of different ways, but in the end, all share the common goal of making a difference in the lives of students and the community. Sophomore Kaylee Gray stated, "There is nothing better than the feeling of having time where I can focus on the greater meaning of life."

Students throughout ASU's religious organizations help make them supportive and healthy places to develop new friendships and grow as they become their future selves. Travis Sharp said his favorite thing that Campus Outreach does is their New Year's Conference during Christmas break. They take a five day trip to Nashville where they join Campus Outreach ministries from ten other colleges for worship, teaching, personal growth seminars and both flag football and basketball tournaments. Travis said the most memorable part of the week is, "Getting to meet other college students and spending the week in fellowship and worship."

"I chose my major Business Economics/Pre-Law because of the numerous benefits and opportunities it provides," Sigma Chi pledge Logan Mustain said. Arkansas State University is a dynamic place to study business; inside the College of Business, you enter a community that is full of engaged students interacting with renowned business faculty to meet the challenges of our global economy.

Sophomore Blade Blevins, said, "I chose accounting because I enjoy problem solving and am really interested in pursuing a career that deals with the accounting industry." The College of Business is a place where new ways of thinking, business strategies and friendships come to life everyday. Accounting, Computer and Information Technology, Economics and Finance and Management and Marketing are the four departments. Freshman Robert Harris explained why he chose his major in the College of Business, chose accounting because being able to keep yourself and oth financially stable will always be a need."

The faculty and staff of the college really are remarkable. Mustain said, "The faculty are the best in the state. They're ea to talk to and very helpful. In a matter of months, they've become family." Arkansas State's College of Business trains a produces students to go out and achieve their goals. Freshma Chace West explained his business plan, "I've known I wante go into law for a while, a courtroom lawyer didn't seem too attractive, but a business lawyer that can determine money a tax laws seems interesting. Directing always gives me a huge adrenaline rush. You have to constantly pay attention to everything going on, but you also have to be three steps ahead.

The College of Communications combines a foundation in the liberal arts and sciences with a core of professional courses to prepare students to succeed in communications. The college has undergraduate programs in communication studies, journalism and radio-television and offers master's programs in mass communications and communication studies. Sigma Chi pledge Jonathan Freeman said, "I chose my major, Communications, because I plan on doing missionary work, and this major will really help with that."

Freeman said, "It provides many job opportunities during your college career." Students of the College of Communications can become involved in extra curriculars such as professional organizations such as Arkansas Advertising Federation, National Broadcasting Society, Society of Professional Journalists and more. Also, there are professional activities such as ASU-TV, Forensics, Debate Team, KASU and The Herald. Some honorary organizations are Kappa Tau Alpha, Lambda Pi Eta and Pi Kappa Delta.

The faulty and staff in the College of communications are always outstanding. Freeman said, "My favorite teacher this semester is Chris Harper. He's energenic and creates a positive learning atmostphere in the classroom. He just makes it fun." The faulty influence the students to be the best they can be while in college and after graduation when they go out into the professional world. The College of Education offers a variety of high quality academic programs at the undergraduate and graduate level. Senior, Jennifer Huskey, said she chose to be an early childhood major because she loves working with children and hopes to get them as excited about learning as she is. Quality academic programs are the result of good curriculum, but more importantly, the College of Education has faculty members who possess the necessary skills and expertise to provide excellence in the classroom. Huskey said, "The instructors in the Education department are all amazing! Each one brings a different approach to teaching. It's obvious each one of them loves their job, and it shows through their teaching." Huskey concludes, "I've had an awesome experience so far!" After graduation, Jennifer Huskey will strive to teach students to love learning as much as she does in a public school because of the impact of Arkansas State's spectacular education program.

The College of Engineering at Arkansas State tinues to change to meet the demanding challenges of ation in the 21st century. Students can work toward eral, civil, electrical or mechanical engineering ees. They can also continue their education at ASU arn a Masters of Engineering Management (MEM). engineering programs at ASU are recognized nally and nationally for their academic excellence unique educational experience. The college promotes llence in engineering education with emphasis on ing, mentoring and student learning. Student, Corey Bevis has confidence in the engineering department, "I chose the College of Engineering because I will be well over qualified for the countless engineering jobs that are offered after graduating from Arkansas State."

Working toward an engineering degree takes a lot of hard work and dedication due to all of the advanced Math and Science included, which is why student Tyler Womble chose his major. He says, "I chose civil engineering because I am good at math and science and because engineers make really good money."

The best artists, designers, photographers, teachers, musicians, singers, composers, actors, directors and scene designers all studied at Arkansas State University. Students chose the College of Fine Arts because it is the only college in the state dedicated to the arts. It presents over 300 visual, performing and cultural events annually. Senior Muriel Aston said, "I chose my major because I want to enjoy my career. Graphic Design includes some of my favorite hobbies and lets me do them for money. What could be better!?"

The faculty and students are actively involved in the creation and study of art at ASU's Fine Arts department. The professors are amazingly talented. Aston said, "We are so lucky to be trained by them!" There are many interesting classes a student could take to get a taste of the fine arts at Arkansas State. "My favorite class this year is Campaign Design where we brand ourselves for getting careers after we graduate." It is a lot of hard work, but it is worth it when students get to express their creative side. The college allows students to connect with other fine art majors and help each other succeed. Also, the talented professors make it possible for the students to have connections for their futures in the real world.

Benjamin Franklin came and taught my US History class. It was really cool how my professor got into the lecture and made the class fun. My favorite part was that he got into character instead of giving a normal lecture.

Degrees and courses offered through the College of Humanities and Social Sciences are crucial to students' understanding connections between the past, present and future, connections between their own experiences and the world they live in and connections between their education and leadership opportunities. Students choose the college for many reasons; Megan Dauksch stated, "I chose to be an English major because of my love of the subject and its versatility. The reading, writing and communication skills I learned in my classes will help me in any career."

Students are able to form lasting relationships with both classmates and professors. Courses and degrees in the liberal arts remain at the central core of what it means to be educated. Courses in the humanities and social sciences serve an important role in the general education of students. "The classes were always fun, engaging and full of useful knowledge," said Dauksch.

Graduating from Arkansas State's College of Humanities and Social Science gives Dauksch the opportunity to continue with her eduation at Law School. Dauksch's final conclusion about the college, "My college experience would not have been the same if I had chosen another field of study and I will always cherish the memories I made in the Wilson Building!"

Arkansas State University has sent over 8,600 nursing and health profession students out into the world and is currently educating over 1,700 students in various undergraduate and graduate majors. Austin Bateman said, "I chose the major, Communication Disorders, since I suffer from a traumatic brain injury after a train-car collision."

The faulty and staff in the College of Nursing and Health Professions really are dedicated to their students. Layla Fisher said, "The nursing program is very competitive, but the professors try their best to help all of their students succeed." The college is very helpful to students in every need they have. Bateman said, "I have to say how great the ASU Speech and Hearing Center is! That's where I've receive speech therapy this semester, and it's been wonderful." It was the great staff of Bateman's therapists and the students who are given a great knowledge in the field that encouraged Austin into thinking, "Hey, I could do that one day!"

When nursing and health students graduate, Arkansas State is confident that the students will go only to better their communities. Fisher says, "I chose to study nursing, so that I can help people and go on medical missions when I graduate."

The College of Math and Science offers many ›portunities for various career fields. Senior Alyssa ›odin said, "I chose my major, Biology, because it is r st helpful to have a science major if you want to get r› Optometry school," which is what Goodin has been ›plying for. Surprisingly enough, Goodin was just ›rs away from earning a Chemistry degree as well so l decided to double major. Goodin said, "It was r›ossible to pass up two majors when you're that close ı you know it would have taken two separate people r years each to do what you have in four years time."

There are so many great aspects of the College of ›th and Science. Goodin said, "My favorite thing is ›ing to know the fellow students that may change the world someday. I may be in classes right now with the person who cures cancer, and that's a really fun to think about."

Goodin is right; these students will go out after graduation and change the world with Arkansas State as the beginning of that journey. Goodin said, "After graduation, I hope to attend Optometry School to pursue a career in the eye care field. Then, hopefully, one day own my own private practice Optometry clinic." The College of Science and Mathematics is a great start for many doctors, biologists, chemists, mathematicians and physicists that will change the world someday.

The University College's mission is to promote the academic success of all Arkansas State University undergraduate students through a supportive environment of community and academic services. For students who do not really know what to do yet, the University College has something for everyone. Benjamin Williams said, "I started off college as a music major, but then I started to question it and went with undecided for now."

The University College provides instruction and other academic services that focus on student success. "The professors are great." Williams said, "I really enjoy my World Lit 2 class with Professor Spikes. I just love how he really gets into the literature. My other professors are great also!"

The University College is not just for those debating on what to do, but also for those who want to do it all. Students can declare three minors to make up a major versus one major to have an interesting variety in their classes. However long it takes for students to decided how to spend the rest of their lives, Arkansas State's University College is there for support.

Students who scored at least a 27 on the ACT and graduated highschool with at least a GPA of 3.5 have the option of being a part of Arkansas State's vigorous Honors College. Caraline Vaughn said, "I chose to do Honors because I enjoy a little challenge," and students accept that challenge for many reasons. "I chose Honors because I was drawn to how involved the college is on campus! They participate in Homecoming week and host various events throughout the year!" said Jenn Ulloa. Some just believe it was meant to be, Corey Bevis said, "I didn't choose the Honors life, the Honors life chose me."

Students maintain these outstanding academic records by sticking to the books and organizing their schedule efficiently. Garrett Dunnam said, "In order to juggle 17 hours of class, 20 hours of work, and going to church, I distinguish my activities from what is important and what is urgent, then I prioritize from there." Being a part of the Honors College is about belonging to something bigger than yourself. It is a chance to learn how to think outside the box through coursework and assignments and helps prepare students future. "My goal, for when I graduate, is to impact the communi that I live in, and I believe one must go beyond the societal norm order to accomplish that. I chose The Honors College at Arkansa because I want to go beyond the norm of college expectations" sai Dunham. I want to hold myself to a higher standard so when pec look at me they see commitment, passion and hard work."

ASU's Honor students will go out and impact the world like Vaughn, "I want to work for a non-profit organization and ultim just make an impact in the world. I don't know exactly what that like yet, but my desire is just to have a purpose and bring light to world." These students will go out into the world and represent Arkansas State University and The Honors College to the best of their ability.

Arkansas State University chose 40 nominees for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges in 2012-2013. These students were called forward to accept one of the most highly regarded honors in the nation. Who's Who Among Students is an organization that is recognized on campuses across the nation and strives to aid campuses in honoring students who demonstrate excellence. ASU- Jonesboro has joined with Who's Who to recognize student leaders on our campus since 1988.

The 2012 award ceremony was on November 26 in the Student Union Auditorium and honored the ASU Who's Who nominees and their guests. The students chosen to represent ASU are leaders in their colleges as well as in activities outside of the classroom. The recipients were selected by a committee that includes students, faculty and staff. Each student was presented their certificate by the Dean of their respective college. After receiving awards, Shanshan Ai said, "It was an amazing experience when I stood on the stage and listened to my college dean praising you. By attending the ceremony, I feel like I could have done even more than I did." She continues, "there is always positive encouragement when you are surrounded by awesome people."

The 2012 Outstanding Who's Who recipient was Zach Marsh. Zach is a senior Biological Sciences major who has big plans after graduation. He is currently in the application process for the Peace Corps. Nominated to work in the health sector, after he gets his invitation he will know what country he will be in and what job he will be performing beginning July 2013. He adds, "I am extremely honored to be selected as the 2012 Outstanding Who's Who. I was honestly completely shocked I received the award. I know I have been involved, yet I didn't feel that that my involvement justified receiving an award of this magnitude. I hope I continue to make the ASU community proud as I continue my future pursuits."

On a campus of 13,000 students, Arkansas State University's Registered Student Organizations provided a place for students with common interests to interact, grow, develop ideas, and build friendships with peers, faculty, and staff. Students from all fields of studies, religions, ethnicities, hobbies, and interests were able to meet and become more involved on campus through the various organizations and activities held in 2012. With over 100 Registered Student Organizations, everyone had a place, or two, to fit in, call home, and be involved in.

Alan Pillow said he, "enjoys being involved with ASU RSO's because it is an escape from classes and work; it is something to be involved in that is fun and enjoyable!" Experiencing life outside of the classroom only enhances the college experience and with the many choices at ASU, finding your niche is effortless! Muriel Aston adds, "I encourage students to become involved in RSO's. They are a lot of fun and can help you grow and learn more about yourself while making lifelong friends!"

RECRUITMENT

In the fall, the Interfraternity Council and National Panhellinic Council organizations at ASU participated in formal recruitment. Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Omicron Pi, Chi Omega and Delta Zeta welcomed potential new members to their suites for a week-long recruitment process. After their formal bid day, Zeta Tau Alpha was able to hold their own formal recruitment to begin a new chapter of Greek life on campus at ASU.

While fraternities' recruitment was similar, it was much more informal and laid-back. Their week was held in an open house style, in which rushees visited the fraternities they were interested in potentially joining. The men of Alpha Gamma Rho, Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Chi and Sigma Pi opened their houses for cookouts and prepared activities to interact and meet the new guys interested in going Greek.

coming together for a cause

Service is a large aspect of being Greek at Arkansas State University. Each organizatio on campus is determined to assist others in local, national and universal needs. IFC, NP and NPHC are committed to specific philanthropies and spend all year donating time, money and effort to each one.

In hopes to reach full potential, sororities and fraternities hold different fundraisers such as "Think Pink" Week, Sleep Out for the Homeless, Derby Days, Special Olympics, various 5Ks and food sales with profits going toward a good cause. Greek unity is strong demonstrated when it is time to participate; every organization is involved in one anothers' philanthropies.

Greek Activities

never a dull moment

Philanthropy events, fundraisers, competitions, community outreach activities, study hall hours, and volunteer service - there was always something going on for the Greeks.

IFC, NPC, and NPHC organizations participated in numerous events throughout the year to bring students, faculty, staff, alumni and the community together.

Activities included events such as Meet the Greeks, pageants like Miss Greek Goddess and Mr. Ebony, step shows, and philanthropic /service events, which every organization held.

Students are elected to serve on IFC, NPC and NPHC boards each year. These boards aim to govern their respective councils while fostering greek unity through activities and events.

"I liked Greek Week most of all because all of the organizations got together. It was a chance to meet new people from different groups," Phi Beta Sigma member Daniel Gates said. "It was cool to be partnered up with other Greeks and have a variety of different people on each team."

ALYSON FREEMAN

When Zeta Tau Alpha, a fraternity for women, ived on campus for recolonization, selecting their sident was a large priority. After a few weeks of erviews and intense deliberation, one woman was ected for the coveted position. Allyson Freeman, a ior chemistry and pre-pharmacy major from wport, Arkansas received the honor of being pointed as the founding President of the Zeta nicron chapter at Arkansas State University.

Freeman had no hesitation about attending kansas State University while she was still in high ool. "It was close enough to home to be convenient, far enough away to where I did not feel that I was l there," she stated. "They also offered amazing olarships that I could not pass up." Once she began ending school at ASU she immediately knew she ed it due to the variety of activites and anizations on campus. Freeman considered the sibility of going through Greek recruitment cause of the opportunity for new friendships, dership experiences, and service," but never went ough with it.

During the Fall 2012 semester, Zeta Tau Alpha veling leadership consultants arrived on campus to ourage women to "Seek the Noblest" and participate ecruitment. After meeting with these women and nding a "Cupcakes with the Consultants" event, eman knew that ZTA was an organization that she extremely interested in. "After meeting and talking the traveling leadership consultants I was igued with the chance to be a founding member of ething so special and that I could help establish its itive identity on campus," Freeman gushed. After a k of meetings, informational sessions, and drop- Freeman was exstatic when she received her bid day l and gained nearly one hundred new sisters.

Her passion for ZTA burns through when she ks about the sorority. Her favorite part about g a member is, "All of the new friendships I have e and the commitment to our philanthropy of moting breast cancer awareness and education." Tau Alpha's philanthropy deals with breast cancer uses their slogan "Think Pink" to generate interest. sorority partners with Yoplait yogurt, as well as Susan G. Komen Foundation to help find a cure.

Each year Freeman participates in the "Race for the Cure" held in Little Rock, Arkansas and her sister works for the Susan G. Komen Foundation in Dallas, Texas so ZTA was perfect for her. She originally applied for the ZTA philanthrophy chair, but was elected as their first ever President. Although it is a large responsibility, Freeman could not be more excited to get the sorority off to a positive start. "It is such an incredible feeling," she said. "I am so honored and excited to get ZTA started off right at ASU. I feel a strong sense of responsibility for our success at ASU."

Not only did Freeman join Zeta Tau Alpha, but she joined the Greek community on campus as well. Becoming Greek has introduced her to many people that she may not have met otherwise stating, "My favorite part about Greek life is the new friends I have made within and outside of ZTA, and the activities I have had the chance to be a part of." She feels as if the biggest reward that comes from being a member of the Greek community is the service opportunities that she has been able to take part in. Freeman feels that Zeta Tau Alpha will make a great addition to the Greek community at ASU; "Since we are a new chapter we have the chance to form new traditions and make a positive impact within Greek life."

Although she is a junior, Freeman feels that waiting to pledge until she was more experienced in college was one of the best decisions that she could have made. "I am more comfortable with myself, my classes, and college in general than I was when I was a freshman," Freeman said assuredly. "Being an upperclassman is not as overwhelming and stressful as it is to be new on campus."

Freeman would definitely recommend Greek life to other students on campus because "It is a great way to become involved on campus and make lasting connections that will follow you after graduation." After she graduates from Arkansas State she plans to go on to pharmacy school at UAMS in Little Rock, Arkansas, and to carry on the ZTA legacy for many years to come.

ELIZABETH ROUSE AFTER FLASHMOB

SAB performed a flashmob at the Student Union outside of Acansa during Homecoming Week. Learning the dance in various staff offices with my co-workers was my favorite Homecoming activity EVER!

DR PAUL SIKKEL

When first stepping into Dr. Paul Sikkel's classroom the Biology department, students are usually taken ack by the looks of the relaxed professor and the unds of Bob Marley pumping through the speakers. r. Sikkel may be one of the most down to earth rofessors that a person could meet and he loves to tell eople about his job, "I am a marine ecologist. I study ings that live in the ocean and their interactions. Iost of my work focuses on parasitic interactions. I ach Biology of Animals, Aquatic Ecology, and hthyology, which is the study of fish. I am also aching a section of Making Connections, which is a rst year course. Additionally, I teach some seminars my specialty, parasite interactions for example." Dr. kkel elaborated, "My official title is Assistant rofessor of Ecology. I am a faculty member, which eans I have a combination of teaching, research, and her responsibilities. I am here to help people learn out things I know about and I am passionate about."

For anyone who has ever spoken with Dr. Sikkel, it obvious that his love for his field runs deep. "It goes ck to when I was a kid," he stated. "Growing up in uthern California, I was at the beach a lot. I first arted snorkeling when I took a class in seventh grade. rom that point on, I knew what I wanted to do. It's y profession and my hobby so if I can't do it then ease shoot me now because it is what I really love."

Between publications, films, and discovering a new ecies, Dr. Sikkel has become an extremely notable searcher over the past few decades. He works on host rasite interactions in coral reef systems, which means looks at parasites and how they infect fish in coral efs, coral reef environments, and their interactions. ith his vast amount of work comes requirements to blish his research. "What we are expected to do as entists is publish works for evaluation," Dr. Sikkel ted. "When being evaluated, some people judge by quality and quantity of your publications. My blications, well the most recent ones, deal with host/ rasite interactions. I've also published over fish and nductive behavior in coral reef fishes. I published er recognition, which is where I studied the ability fish to recognize their relatives, believe it or not."

Dr. Sikkel has also been featured in a documentary itled Seasons in the Sea. "The film was actually made k in the early 90's by a guy named Howard Hall. I s fortunate enough to be invited to the island where y were filming. One of the things that they were erested in filming was the fish that I happened to be ng my Doctorate on, so I was the expert on the n. I told about my research and part of that film me talking about such. I was also asked to be a sultant, so they sent me parts of the film and the pt and asked me to check the script against the film submit any corrections that I saw needed to be de. I was a consultant in my research essentially. It a Golden Panda award which is the most stigious award that a nature film can receive, so that pretty cool."

Although he has many publications and has been of a feature film, Dr. Sikkel's most notable mplishment is the discovery of a new species, in which he named gnathia Marleyi. "One of the main parasites that we work on are Gnathiid Isopods." Dr. Sikkel explained, "They feed on fish blood. So they find the fish, hop on, drink their blood, and hop off so they are kind of like ticks of the sea. Really they spread from the Arctic to the Antarctic and everywhere between. They are hard to find because they only come out at night and they are small, but if you really know what you are looking for you can catch hundreds of them. We were working off of St. John at the Virgin Islands and we named the species after Bob Marley. We named gnathia Marleyi after him because we really like him and you can't get much more Caribbean than Bob Marley. We had been working for about ten years putting fish out in cages at night. These parasites would come and feed off the fish. We were sure that because the parasites were so abundant and you could catch them by the hundreds, that surely they had been discovered before. We finally decided to send specimens to an expert in South Africa. One of my buddies looked at it and said, "Oh this has never been described before," so we sent in the paper describing the species and gave it a name, which allows you to express a little artistic ability. A lot of us in science really love the art side of it so it's great. If you discover it, you can name it whatever you want as long as it follows the rules, you know it has a genus and species name."

Along with his work, Dr. Sikkel has also put time and effort into the Repower America movement, which is a movement to conserve energy sources. "I got involved because one day a student was working for an organization and asked me to sign a petition and I agreed. Then they asked me if I would agree to appear in an ad for the organization, and so I did that. It just snowballed from there. It is a good organization. It is something that I am passionate about. I think it is important people recognize ecology is a science. It turns out that the vast amounts of ecologists are conservationists too. So I in turn think that taking care of the environment is very important."

Dr. Sikkel says that all of his work has made a large difference in his life. "It has changed all for the better certainly," he said. "My research has allowed me to be able to be a part of film projects and media and share what I know with the general public. It has also allowed me to work with college students who are interested in the subject. It has just allowed me to reach a lot more people." Dr. Sikkel is very well known around Lab Science as a wonderful teacher, but comes by it modestly. "I think maybe it is because I love working with kids. My first job was working at a daycare center for the children of employees at Cal Tech, which were the children of scientists. It was run by basically hippies and artists. Those kids were just so excited to learn new things so I just decided to bring that excitement to the classroom. Learning should be fun, you know it should be. Somewhere along the lines, fun gets taken out. I don't know where it is exactly, but it gets rigid and loses creativity. So I try to make it fun for adults. Hopefully by doing that they'll be excited about it and want to learn more about it on their own."

AMBASSADORS The 2012-2013 ASU Chancellor's Ambassadors group served as campus hosts to academic, business, political and social leaders who participated in university functions. To be an ambassador students must maintain a minimum of 3.0 GPA, be a full time student and be beyond their first academic year at ASU. Photo provided by: The Leadership Center

EVAN RIEKHOF WHILE BEING AN AMBASSADOR

While serving as a Chancellor's Ambassador, I have had the opportunity to meet several important people from the school, state, and the community, such as the mayor of Jonesboro, the Governor of Arkansas and even the Great Great Great Granddaughter of Charles Dickens.

BDA the election

Before: I listened to parts of the Presidential Debate and read lots of opinions on Twitter and Facebook. I was personally for Romney because I believe it is time for a change in our country.
During: I watched the news.
After: I was a little disappointed when I heard the results, but I have hope that Obama can learn from the past and change our nation for the better.

Election

Every four years the presidential election takes place in the United States. On the Republican side was Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney, and on the Democratic side was President Barack Obama. History was made in 2008 when Obama was elected as the first African American president, but it was unclear as to whether or not his historical journey would continue into the next four years.

Much debate about who would be the best president took place between Americans, both in person and in social media. At ASU, an actual debate was held before Election Day. An election watch party was even held for students to come together and support their candidate of choice. "It's a great experience to watch the political campaign here in the United States, which is totally different for most of African countries," Salum Abubakary said, who experienced American democracy for the first time.

In the end, with 332 electoral votes, President Obama was re-elected.

Dreaming On

I'm looking forward to seeing Obama's new health care reforms and his plan to lower the U.S. national debt.

Mitt Romney has a more solid program to rescue the economy. If America wants to continue to exercise leadership around the world, it must restore the strength of the economy.

Construction

building a better future

Several construction projects have taken place at Arkansas State University throughout 2012 and 2013.

On March 31, 2012, the Sorority Row Groundbreaking took place. This event marked the beginning of an exciting change for sororities. It was the opening for a multi-phase project for Greek housing that will eventually allow select students to live in houses designated to different sororities. The houses are tentatively scheduled to be completed in June of 2013 and are expected to be ready for move-in during August of 2013.

This has been a very welcome change for students at ASU. Freshman Miranda Greenway said, "This is a really exciting time for Alpha Omicron Pi! Our sisterhood has grown tremendously, and it is getting to the point where we all can barely fit in our suite. This house has been a long time coming, and we couldn't be happier that it will be done next fall. Now we'll have a spacious chapter room for meetings and nice living space for our sisters. It's a beautiful building and we can't wait to move in!"

Along with the construction of the sorority houses, the IT Store was completed and the liberal arts building continued to be built. The IT Store, which sells both Apple and Microsoft technology, held its grand opening on October 31, 2012. When the Humanities and Social Sciences building is completed, it will host the departments of criminology, sociology and geography; english and philosophy; history; political science; and world languages and cultures.

Change is in the air for ASU, and through these construction projects, the university will be - literally - building a better future for all the students and faculty.

Dreaming On

I have been looking forward to living in the house since I first heard ASU was building sorority houses. I can't wait to be one of the first women to live there. It's going to be so neat to come back in 50 years and say that I was the first president of the house.

BDA the Honors housing construction

Before: Before construction there was hardly enough room for all the honors students. Many of the freshmen had to stay in Kays and the upperclassmen in the quads.
During: It blocked off the more convenient paths to class and left us with little parking.
After: Everyone that wants a room will be able to get one and we'll have more parking. The new building will also have a kitchen and some study rooms which will be really helpful. I'm really excited for the new building.

ANDREW FLEEMAN DURING IT STORE GRAND OPENING

The grand opening at the IT Store was October 31st. We had a huge giveaway for five MacBook Airs and two iPads. There was a costume contest of which the winner won a pair of Beats Studio headphones.

CHAMPIONS

AFTER this year at ASU, we will seek out professional careers.

become alumni.
go on summer vacation.
visit family.
continue to cheer on our Red Wolves.
pack up our residence halls.
count down the days until the fall semester.
start over again.
welcome more freshman.

On, on on to victory!
Brave team you're second to none.
Let's make this game history!
Along with the others we've won!
FIGHT! FIGHT! FIGHT!
With all your might
So that the world may see
That RED W-O-L-V-E-S
Means victory!
STATE!
